Event Description

Women face many challenges as they gain leadership opportunities in the workplace. They are expected to be competent but warm and can become self-defeated in this struggle to find the right balance. To mitigate this struggle, we will be focusing on helping you to establish a strong Leadership Presence.

We will be utilizing the unique and enthusiastic approach of the Pig Iron School to help you develop your leadership presence. Pig Iron is a theater group that uses their stage skills to teach how to "confidently command audiences, to be brilliant and persuasive communicators, to speak with authority and authenticity, to be able to solve problems creatively, and to lead others toward a common vision." You won't be bored in this interactive and energetic session!

Furthermore, women are not always champions for each other. It is vital for women to see others filling the roles they themselves wish to one day perform. We will spend some time discussing the actions women can take to coach, mentor, and help each other to succeed.
